Senate Fight On CIA Reins Is Postponed

Senate leaders postponed their showdown fight over supervision of the Central Intelligence Agency once again yesterday.

Majority Leader Mike Mansfield announced that the concerned parties would try to work out a compromise this week after meeting yesterday morning with Sens. Richard Russell (D-Ga.), J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.), John Stennis (D-Miss.) and Eugene J. McCarthy (D-Minn.).

Fulbright had announced last week that he would introduce McCarthy's resolution which would create a new committee to supervise the CIA by adding three members to the Russell group which currently watches the CIA.
